Job description

You will be joining an experienced and growing engineering team to build innovative products in the LegalTech space.

You will be building responsive HTML5 applications for our growing range of web products. You will work on a wide variety of tasks including design and architecture, researching technology choices, writing code and tests and optimising performance.

What you'll be doing

- Writing well-tested, clean and performant code according to feature requirements
- Taking ownership of tasks, communicating ideas and decisions throughout the team and ensuring tasks are fully completed with high quality
- Building UIs for innovative tools and applications
- Assessing technology choices and integrating third party products
- Writing tests as standard
- Following an agile process and contributing to continuous improvement of the process

Things we like to see in a candidate:

- Strong interpersonal skills and the ability to work in a supportive, collaborative environment
- A good understanding of core Javascript fundamentals and Functional Programming.
- Experience working with rich user interfaces and web applications
- Keen understanding of browser performance and constraints and of rendering high volumes of data
- Experience and knowledge of UI usability and accessibility
- Experience with mobile web applications, responsive designs and React Native will be highly advantageous

Key technologies we use

React, React Native, Redux, Node.js, RxJs, Gulp, CommonJs (Webpack), ES6, REST, Bootstrap

We currently have a central London office and are planning a return to hybrid working. We hope to be able to support team members who want to work primarily in the office or remotely.

We are an equal opportunities employer and welcome applications from all suitably qualified persons regardless of their race, sex, disability, religion/belief, sexual orientation or age.
